So-Called "Temperance" Measure Greatly Increases Sale of Alcoholic Drinks

Because of the persistence with schich the wets in the United States have put forward the system of control in certain provinces in Canada as a model, The Christian Science Monitor recently sent a staff correspondent to the border to make an investigation of condi-tions there. The result of his in-yestigation appears in a series of articles, of which the following is the eleventh.

QUEBEC (Staff Correspondence) The results of the Quebec liquor control system which the wets in the Development of New Rail United States urge that country to adopt in place of prohibition, may be summarized in a few words: it has put the Government into partnership with the brewer. In doing so it has been found that the hoped-for result been found that the hoped-for result of eliminating bootlegging, illicit engines are approaching maturity sales and blind pigs has not been and within the next few years may achieved; the proof of this failure be an important factor in eliminat being the admissions made by the ing smoke from railroad trains, Hal Liquor Control Commission which is Liquor Control Commission which is Eurlington & Quincy Railroad, told the organ of the Government, and the Chicago City Council's sub-commisso by the evidence of convictions mittee on electrification which is carried in the daily papers.

Figures show that the Quebec system has not diminished the consumption of intoxicants but has greatly stimulated it, and at the same time offered enormous rewards to brewers under government auspices. How the government engineers take their minute calculations of tidal currents unfolds a story of ac-

the Chicago City Council's sub-committee on electrification which is holding hearings on the problem. The same view was expressed by L. C. Fritch, vice-president of the Rock Island Railroad, who represented his lines at the hearing.

"Within the pext few years we should have units of this power available," Mr. Holden said. "The Burlington is anxiously watching the perfection of this new type of motor each half hour for periods of 25 consecutive hours at a time. In addition to this, electric curtrification."

There is no reason why the new type of engine should not be perfected soon, Mr. Fritch added in support of Mr. Holden's forecast. "We may look for engines of 1000 horspower, although now oil-electric engines are capable of only 200 horsepower."

The step is regarded as of great importance and is expected to weaken the influence of Moscow in Bulgaria, to a stempthen the Socialist Party and to hasten the formation of a strong moderate left wing group of workers and agrarians which may eventually dominate Bulgarian politics.

the deputies to support M. Poincaré who, even were he overthrown, would, as interminister, conduct the elections. It is hoped today that

M. Poincaré properly takes the view that the Finance Minister must be Premier and entirely responsible. It is a difficult task requiring liberty of movement and authority.

Louis Barthou consented to take the Ministry of Justice, Paul Painlevé the Ministry of War, Aristide Briand Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Albert Sarraut is somewhat dependent on the Radical Party.

Generally there is need for dropping party tactics, and, despite the Radicals who are Calliauxists, who are Herriotists, it is believed that after recent experiences, more caution will be shown. It is notable that Raoul Peret was elected against both the Radicals and Socialists candidates to the presidency of the Chamber, which M. herriot lost when he descended into the arena. The Government intends to practice exceptional economy and must be able to act freely whether the Calliaux formula of "delegation of powers" or the Herriot formula of fullest liberty is to be adpoted. A revision of taxes is required. "France must save itself" is the motto most repeated, indicating reluctance to obtain an external loan. Should M. Poincaré fall, M. Sarraut may try his hand.

INTERNATIONAL LABOR OFFICE TO STUDY PROBLEM OF DRINK added, "will ever give better proof of the power of alcohol capital."

Statement Made at the Congress Against Alcoholism Now Being Held in Estonia

By Special Cable TARTU, Estonia, July 23-The International Labor Office at Geneva may be expected to take up a research into the question of alcohol as the cause of accidents, according to Taplo Voionmaa of Finland, speaking before the Eighteenth International Congress Against Al-coholism. Mr. Volonmaa, formerly secretary of the Finnish legation in London, now on the staff of the International Labor Office declared that Albert Thomas, director, that institution was very anxious to keep the question in the foreground, and the matter was expected to come before the governing body at an early date. A paper on the subject of alcohol as the cause of railway and automo-oile accidents by Dr. Lagriffe of Brest, France, was read, as Dr. Lagriffe was unable to attend. The congress then tics, of course taking into account turned to the consideration of the experiences of other countries, question of alcohol and the army and but without servile imitation, Dr.

"The motorist is no longer in rapid control of his motor; the driver becomes the siave of that timid creature, the horse; the railway engine-driver who neglects to obey the signals; the pointsman who forgets to shift his points; the plate-ends.

Dr. Legrain pointed out that the

He also touched guardedly on the difficulties of commercial policy for small, economically weak states, mentioning that the necessity o safeguarding the exportation of fish from Norway and Iceland to Spain and Portugal had necessitated a re-laxation of the prohibition laws in the former countries from total prolibition to "spirits prohibition."

Total Prohibition Preferred

"Wherever total prohibition is apchoice lies between no prohibition or prohibition of spirits, as in Nor the advantages and disadvantages of prohibition of spirits should be calmly weighed and the measure should not be rejected in doctrinaire fashion as being a deviation from pure theory."

Dr. Legrain pointed out that the great conflict of 1914 had brought home the acuteness of the alcohol problem to most of the belligerent nations. Some of them, like the United States and Finland, had reaped the enormous advantages offered them by the well-informed views of their people, by then and reaped the enormous advantages of-fered them by the well-informed views of their people, by then and there introducing prohibition. He regretted France had not done so too, but the liquor interests were too strong.

More than all he regretted the "gnols"—or rations of spirits specially adulterated with ether and other toxic poisons, which was provided for the combatants by the French authorities for the purp and with the results already scribed. Limited Prohibition

Nevertheless, France had prohibited certain of the worst kinds of alcohol, as for example, absinthe. In his own view, it would have been better to have prohibited "even wine"—which was not done, however. Neither was home distillation, the Colonel continued, prohibited during the war, though the amount of "free" distillation allowed was reduced to 10 liters. Finally, toward the end of the war, a state monopoly was introduced, but this "in no way remedied the danger." Nevertheless, France had prohibited

Return to Drinking Habits

When the war broke out, the great mportance of the question, "Alcohol and military service" was not generally recognized in Germany, General Banes went on. The mobilization was carried out without alcohol and during the first weeks of mobile opera-tions little alcohol was taken. But laier the privations attendant on trench warfare, the coming on of the inclement season, combined with the action of the liquor trade, brought about, notwithstanding the provisions of the war-time sanitary ordinances, a return of the drinking made to the troops and even, on some occasions, of spirits. It was used in the military hospitals, sent to the troops as gifts from the population and, finally, it was found in the depota left by the enemy. Drink-ing habits, he declared, played an important part in bringing about the failure of the offensive operations by the German Army in the spring and summer of 1918.

To Be Included in the Furniture Sale

Savings of 10 to 25% Exceptional interest attaches this year to Belmaison's part in the Furniture Sale, always an occasion of neommon importance. Hitherto our purchases abroad have been made in mid-summer, arriving in the Fall too late to be included in the Sale. But this year we made our foreign selections in the Spring. The shipments from France, England, Italy and Spain are already here and will be included many interesting new examples which we have never had before . with our regular stock in the Sale savings. One need scarcely say that such an opportunity is not in the ordinary course of daily

Fine English Mahogany and New Overstuffed Furniture

Especially rewarding is the extremely fine collection of 18th Century makogany reproductions which have just arrived from England. Hepplewhite, Chippendale and Sheraton chairs, dining and serving tables of the best types. Tall Sheraton inland cabiners. A Chippendale writing table of the simple massive sort that is so admirable in a man's study. A Queen Anne mahogany drop-front deal. 18th Century knee-hale writing deaks and sofa tables. The small triped and two-tier tables that give such intimate charm to the typical English interior. The big comfortable, picturesque overstuffed chairs and sofas, covered with flowered chintzes, that one sees in English country houses.

Gay little French painted chairs covered with the most enchanting specimens of old needlework, or with unusual bits of material that cannot be duplicated. Low painted tables that would be equally delightful for serving in the drawing-room or on the verandah. New examples of porch and yacht furniture. All these in addition to Belmaison's regular stocks . . early American maple . French provincial pieces . . Jacobean oak . . French, Italian and Spanish painted furniture . . garden chairs and tables. Every piece, without exception, marked with the blue tag that indicates the savings of the saie.

> Pan-Asiatic Conference Has Only Peaceful Ideals as Its Object

By Special Cable TOKYO, July 23—The forthcoming Pan-Asiatic Conference is in no way based on opposition to the Western world, the managing director, Juntaro Imazato, informed The Christian Science Monitor representative. The cabled reports of recent American comments to this effect are considered due to misinformation on the true motive of the conference. The Tokyo Government is privately seeking to minimize the importance of the conference, and any permanent organization resulting therefrom. Both the conference and any subsequent organization will be entirely nonpolitical. The interchange of scholars among Asiatics and other methods of fostering friendship and understanding will constitute the platform offered for adoption. Any American or European will be eligible for membership as well as Asiatics.

Mr. Imazato said that while it was true there were numerous instances of western aggression in Asia, it was not necessary to leave Asia to find such cases. He believes there are probably just as many instances of injustice and oppression among Asiatic nations, and he adds that it s Pan-Asiatics' duty to rectify these

Come Out of the Kitchen!

Grandmother might have been shocked by such a suggestion, for she was "kitchen-minded" from necessity.

For some years, Swift & Company, however, has been working to relieve the modern housewife of continuous kitchen work. Now, in addition to the many less expensive cuts adaptable to steam pressure and fireless cooker preparation, the housewife has the service of cooked meats.

"Ready-to-serve" meats are now available everywhere, for Swift & Company's nationwide channels of distribution offer prompt and direct service to retailers.

These meats, in great variety and delightfully appetizing, have revolutionized the work of the housewife, especially during the hot summer

SPOKANE, Wash., July 23 (Spe-Indians attending the Second National Congress to organize the In- in dians into bodies capable of acting intelligently and unitedly on Indian problems.

The congress had been charged by playing up and commercializing the savagery and picturesqueness of year or this because there was no organization. At this point Paul G. Wapato, Chelan Indian graduate of Willamette, Wenatchee newspaperman and a special writer on the Spokane Chronicle, guided the congress into a definite program. He said: "I am vitally interested in the idea that the civic clubs might have something for the sudents and he eats at the students' co-operative lunch—that is, when he isn't a guest at one of the fraternity houses. # Bituminous Men of Mid-West Enter Controversy on Rates

Illinois, Minnesota, Wisconsin and North Dakota Interests Protest Lower Tariff From Ohio and Pennsylvania to Lake Erie Ports

Special from Monitor Bureau ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 23 (Special) — Illinois bituminous coal mine workers entered the swiftly spreading controversy between soft ditional revenue. sent back empty, producing no additional revenue.

It was declared by the southern mine operators and railroads of the North and South, by protesting before the Interstate Commerce Commission here against a proposed reduction of freight rates from the Pennsylvania and Ohio mines to Lake Erie ports.

At the same time, representatives of civic bodies and public utilities commissions in Minnesots, Wisconsin and North Dakota, also vigorously opposed any freight change which would give unionized coal fields a monopoly over a large section of the retail field."

As in the case of New England state representatives who appeared at a similar hearing here recently delegates from these northern states asserted that they desired a wide source of coal supply, and wanted to be able to buy southern coal in the event of a strike in the northern fields, without paying exorbitant freight rates.

As defined a revenue.

It was declared by the southern mine operators, who are opposing the proposed decreased rate for the northern sections, that the rorthern bitumians fields is higher production costs, including payment of union wages, as against lower production costs and non-union systems in the southern districts.

Says Wages Was Whole Canse

C. J. Goodyear of Pittsburgh Operators' Lake Coal Rate Committée, denied that this was entirely so, but admitted that the wage question was partially responsible for the trouble which, he said, was caused about equally by wages and freight rates.

Mr. Goodyear insisted, however, the freight rates on the northern roads are unfair, as compared with those from the South. As an instance, he said that the Raltimore & Ohio.

Allege Southern Advantage On the other hand, the Pennsylvania and Ohio operators declare that because of unfair freight rates, the southern mines are gaining a monopoly of the north and northeastern market, having the great added advantage, also, of being non union union and paying much lower wages to the miners.

It is this question of non union mines and lower production costs which is the real crux of the condict, according to ready admission of delegates to the hearing here, but since the wage scale cannot be altered in either field at this time, the heavy guns on both sides have been brought to bear on the freight rates. The Illinois miners—district No. 12, United Mine Workers of America—were reported by Judge A. W. Kerr of Springfield, Ill. He declared that even at this time, the Pennsylvania and Ohio mines could deliver coal to Lake Erie ports cheaper than trom the Illinois miners in Frankin county, and thus had caused a decrease in production in the latter section and subsequent laying off of miners.

Similar opposition to the proposed Freight rate reduction was expressed by H. M. Slater, also of Springfield, a member of the Illinois State Commerce Commission, who declared that if the Interstate Commerce Commission, who declared that if the Interstate Commerce Commission, who declared that if the Interstate Commerce Commission, who declared that if the Interstate Commerce Commission with Intersta

An argument for the reduction was

he said, could stand a decrease so as

"The secondary education in high "The secondary education in high on each side of the street from Arischools is by no means the only part of the system to benefit from improvements." Dr. A. O. Thomas, Commissioner of Education, says. "We have seen the erection of a large number of country schools known as the consolidated type. In the districts where distances make this unfeasible, the old form of single teacher schools where the school-state for the street widening by using house were the school-state for the street widening by using the set-off. S. Lawrence, president of the New S. Lawrence, president of the New England Council, in a letter to Ralph O. Street property owners can compensate for the street widening by using disappeared in favor of the new type containing a minimum of three rooms."

Another acvantage which the State has steadily worked to bring to the achool children has been in the matter of improved transportation. As an example of their success, the commissioner cites the winter transport which has been installed in Eustis, the first of its kind in the world. A large heated van on runners is drawn six miles over an average depth of three feet of snow in 45 minutes by a gasoline tractor.

Question of Legality

The question to be put before the legal authorities is whether an individual can waive the restrictions and whether the city can widen the roadway by taking the profiered strips of land on both sides of the street where the setbacks exist.

The members of the Newbury-Streat Association are the prime to movers in this unusual proposition.

Fletcher L. Torrey, chairman, and Harry Kakas, Jacob C. Rogers and their conference yesterday with the street commissioners told tham that their conference yesterday with the street commissioners told tham that the desire of the property owners on Newbury Street from Arlington to Dartmouth Streets was for the widening of the street by the city at its expense, provided they donated the necessary land.

At the same time, the association's determination of our six states to act together in dealing with their necessary land.

Modern Lighting Desired

At the same time, the association's representatives made it plan that they wanted modern street lighting provisions installed as part of the proposition. That no betterment assessments be levied is a third condition the Newbury Street people insist upon if their donation of land on the thoroughfars is accepted.

The setbacks are 20 feet on each side of the street. Their validity has never been successfully attacked. There is pronounced legal opinion that by common consent property owners might have this restriction removed. The street commissioners have asked the association to ascertain if all of the property owners in the section which asks for the widening are favorably disposed toward the plan.

In their petition to the city, the sum like this makes an appreciable difference in the tax burden, and any government in power must think twice before taking steps to reduce liquor consumption in view of the difference it will make in the annual receipts. The privilege of selling much a monopoly in Quebec today as is the potash monopoly of Ger-many, and the nitrate monopoly in Chile, and the monopoly is more

Allenating the Best Citizen This may make a certain type of citizen-who in the United States is now violating the law-amenable to the Quebec law, but it undoubtedly alienates the highest type of citizen in the Province, the man who does not like to see his Government playing bartender. Probably the strong-est argument against Government control is not based on statitical analyses, but simply on this feeling, that under it the Government forfeits the respect of a large share of its best citizens when it takes over and runs for its own profit the bars and taverns. It appears that even the Government cannot make the task of bar-tender respectable. So long as the Government runs the drink trade, those averse to the system declare, the Government must take respon-sibility for every drunken man reeling down the street. Liquor Consumption Grows Consumption of liquor in the four years of the Quebec system have constantly increased, and the sponsors of it have dropped their claims to the contrary. They are now conmade to all the classes that a sale of centrating their arguments on the shoes, hats, suits, dresses, stockings, ties, shirts, etc., would be held on a ling away from hard drinks to wine ties, shirts, etc., would be held on a certain day, and that all parents of and beer. Here again statistics may the poorer children were invited to be unreliable. The latest figures show a decrease of from 775,991.

The garments attribute this decrease as much to the tightening of the border control of sound shoes, or a nice dress for against rum-smuggling, as to a sud50 cents—the idea of payment being Province under Government control. While spirits are reported to have dropped off in sales, a great increase of sales of wines and beers is undisputed Instead of 627 942 gallons of wines sold, the latest figure shows.

Inasmuch all concerned were blessed—the givers in finding a place for outabout half in local option territory haps 1,150,000, and substracting an money realized from the sale was used to buy a graphophone which of the Province, a little calculation shows that on this liberal estimate, the Quebec system drinks about five gallons more beer annually now than he did at the start of Government control—the so-called "temperance" measure! Profits Are Very Great

The profits to the Quebec from this sort of Government-assisted "temperance" have been enormous. They are so large that it is only natural that the grocers and small stores which are permitted to sell wines and beers should wish to share in, and increase them. The following demands made in 1925 by the Licensed Victualler's Association, illustrate how insatiable the wet element will be for more and more gains, once it gets its way in a community. The representatives of this group appeared before Mr. Taschereau, the Premier, and demanded the following amendments to the One-be Lieux Law.

New Rules to Overcome Extreme Competition Advised by Commissioner

MADISON, Wis., July 23 (P)—Success in business is handicapped by "extreme competition" in virtually all lines, Edward Nortman, State Comdisisoner of Markets, finds.

"One of the facts brought out at the coal hearings recently held by the department of markets." he stated, "is that extreme competition is mak-ing it hard for all but the well-intrenched to make their business or calling a success. In practically all lines the complaint is that there are too many people trying to make a living therein and that improvement in these lines depends upon the ability to divert the surplus to some other occupation. But when inquiry is made regarding the possibility of other lines absorbing the surplus it is found that it is welcome to none

"Unless shielded by special priv flege those lines are already adversely affected by surplus produc-tion, and more producers would only increase the difficulties under which they are now operating. This applies they are now operating. This applies to farmers, to all kinds of merchants, to most manufacturers, and to a vast majority of laborers, all of whom will say, and truthfully, that more competition for them will only make bad conditions worse.

"This surplus does not exist because there are too many people or cause there are too many people or because there is too much produc-tion; it exis's because the masses are underpaid and are, consequently unable to purchase the equivalent in value of what they produce. Exces-sive competition in all lines can be gations of spirits about to read a value of what they produce a beliminated by establishing a balance the tightening of the border control between purchasing power and production.

"It is my opinion that the solu tion lies in the Government exercis-ing proper control over its natural resources and in an efficient administration of an economically sound tax policy."

Wanamaker Budget Payment Plan

It is simply an extended charge account, in which, by prearrangement, 'the bill is paid in a series of monthly payments instead of all at once. The length of time and size of payment depend upon the amount of the purchase.

Nothing is required of the customer but the usual reference for opening any charge account.

If payment is completed in three monthly portions there is no charge for the time accommodation. A small Budget charge is made for a longer extension of time.

Everything pertaining to home furnishing may be purchased by this plan.

No leases to sign—nothing but an agreement verifying your understanding of these terms.

Not at all to be confused with the old-fashioned installment plan—because you get guaranteed Wanamaker quality at the same price as cash purchases. It is yours from the start. You have every privilege and no penalties.

This surely is what Ruskin would mean by borrowing with interest. In the field of painting one does not condemn Raphael for the ideas that he caught from his teacher, Perugino, because of the fertility of those ideas. Yet in the niaetcenth century the followers of Raphael who copied the same ideas, but somehow in a pale, diluted form, became anathema to a small group of eager young painters. Thus arose the Pre-Raphaelite School. And in literature, we condemn such borrowings as those of Coleridge, because the poet did nothing to make those ideas his own. Who has ever wished to condemn Shakespeare for taking overhis plots, almost bodily, from earlier works, even earlier plays:

As for ourselves—it is well that we live in a more scrupulous age, when the borrower must acknowlege his debt even to the uttermost farthing. Since most of us are not Wagners or Raphaels or Shakespeares, there may be slight temptation to borrow at all. But we may rest in the assurance that our own productions are safe, in so far as they are marked, not by the glitter matter, when, dealing with imitative architecture in his "Seven Lamps of Architecture," he demanded that there should be only "borrowing with interest." In other words, as human living is dependent upon the past and its ideas, there must be borrowing of a sort if there is to be any continuity, any progress; and in this borrowing there is one, and only one moral-artistic obligation namely, that the borrower shall add something of himself, thus making something of himself, thus making the old idea or form his own. We might even say that the thought belongs not to the first person who happens upon it (after all most of us have approximately the same general ideas), but to the one who nurtures it, cultivates it until it bears abundance of fruit for the authorized.

All this started from hearing a symphony of Liszt, one hitherto unfamiliar to me. At the opening chords I was startled and electrified. familiar to me. At the opening chords I was startled and electrified. Could it be that this was not Wagner; there must be some mistake; it was not just Wagner in general, but the Wagner of Tristan and Isolde! the Wagner of Tristan and Isolde! As the music progressed, it became evident in many ways that it was not Wagner. And I thought to myself with indignation: "What outrageous, inexcusable plagiarism! What right had Lisst, or anyone else, to make use of those heart-breaking strains which the great German composer has conceived to prelude his most tragic, most poignant opera!" Forchronology aside—one's instinct in such cases is ever to see in the lesser work the successor, the imitation. It was only later that I looked up the matter, and found that though the two musicians were contemporaries, yet that it was Wagner and not Lisst who was the "borrower." For a learned musical critic next day referred to Wagner's "audacious borrowing of themes and whole passages of harmonious progressions from the symphony for his own music drams. Wagner learned heavily on Lisst's shoulders."

Speares, there may be slight temprest in the assurance that our own productions are safe,, in 20 far as rest in the assurance that our own productions are safe,, in 20 far as the time of any easily reflected sophistry, but with the impress of our own hard-anise of theme, but by latense content the impress of our own hard-anise the impress of theme, but by latense content the impress of theme, but by latense of theme, but by latense content the impress of theme, but by latense of theme, but by laten rest in the assurance that our own productions are safe, in so far as they are marked, not by the glitter of any easily reflected sophistry, but with the impress of our own hard-achieved thought. Originality and genius are won, not by outlandishness of theme, but by intense concentration on the matter chosen and appropriation of it. There is no other originality that will not soon become second-hand. C. F. B.

The only difference outside was the front door, which was plain oak with black which was plain oak with black knocker and handle and hinges in artistic ironwork; but once inside it might have been a country manor house in miniature. The little draw-ing room was quite charming; it had a pretty bay window with a nice deep eat upholstered out of some old hangings in puce satin, and all the cushions were covered in taffeta silk of the same color. Paper Valances for a Mountain Bungalow from wallpaper.

Expensive, tough paper having a deep cream background with a design of gentian-blue, rose and yellow flowers intermingled with dull green leaves and peacocks in greens and blues, was chosen for the set made for a cottage in the White Moun-tains. Less than one-half roll of the paper was required for the set, and the cost was much less than if made of cretonne in the same de-

Cutting the Strips

Two strips, each 14 inches by 24 inches long, were cut for one window. The crafts worker then measured down 18 inches on each side lines from the measuring dots on the sides to the dot in the center of the bottom edge and connected them with lines. Cutting along these lines made a long point to the rectangular strip. Another place was needed for the window. She cut a place of paper 18 inches access the ton and paper 18 inches across the top and 151/2 inches in length. Her next step was to measure down each side 7% inches. From brown paper she cut a semi-circular pattern which would fit between the two measuring dots. When this third piece of the valance was cut she had a pattern with a straight top and semi-circular bot-

Faded cretonne which had been used for overdraperies made the lin-ing of the valances. It was cut in the ing of the valances. It was cut in the same shapes as the paper, but '\(^1\) inch was allowed for turning in the edges, which were carefully pressed with a hot iron. The paper pieces and the linings were basted together and the edges were finished with blanket stitching of gentian-blue knitting worsted. The points of the two long pieces and the center of the semi-circular edge of the other piece were decorated with famels. What was to the writer the most completely satisfying and successful scheme was seen in a bedroom furnished in this wood.

more fragile wicker effects which are often favored for the porch should rather be evoided. Painted metal furniture or wooden pleces such as are designed for the garden are a better choice because they can be left out in all weathers.

Painted wooden chairs, especially if they be treated with a good coat of waterproof varnish, will last in their pristine freshness throughout the season. Folding deck chairs are not difficult to remove to a dry spot, and offer a most happy lounging place for the man of the house in the evening.

Standard hammocks may not only be used during the daytime, but are often comfortable enough to be used for sleeping on torrid nights. Folding canvas cots, an inexpensive purchase, can be adapted for the same purpose.

Where floor coverings are designed to add to the coxiness, it is well to forage among the many varieties of strong fiber or straw mats, usually offered for porch use in many charging colors and designs. Care must be taken to choose these to harmonize well with the color of the awning, the furniture and the scheme in general.

Making it a Garden

Of courage a roof sarden without flowers and plenty of green things seems a hollow mockery, and, when the problem of watering easily has been overcome, these may be near pensively urovided and cared for.

About the edges of the roof place boxes similar to the usual window-box type. Ordinary wooden boxes made at home or bought from the department stores, when stiractively

SUPERPOWER RISES ABOVE STATIC LEVEL

Its First Summertime Test Proves Contentions of Engineers

During warm weather, natural radio interference generally rises to a very considerable level. Radiocast a very considerable level. Radiocast signals which, during cold weather, have been readily intercepted with little or no regard for ethereal disturbances, now seem barely capable of clearing the high invisible barrier; indeed, in many instances are hopelessly lost in the rising tide of parasitic disturbances.

Static exists throughout the year in varying degrees, reaching its peak in varying degrees, reaching its peak during midsummer. Hence it is for the radiocaster to provide a signal strength at the receiving end which strength at the receiving end which will exceed by some margin, at least, the static level. With some margin, reception is feasible.

With considerable margin, really good reception is possible. And if there is a great margin between signal strength and static level, then ideal reception is possible irrespective of the intensity of the static. After all, it is not the static interference which is the main consideration: it is the relative strength of the intercepted signals that counts. For a better understanding of

For a better understanding of when and why high-power signals can be received at this time of the year in many localities, with more or less complete freedom from static interference, it is necessary to explain how static level and signal strength are measured and com

Static-Signal Comparison

Radio engineers have evolved a ally operating on about 35 kilowatts simple means of gauging signal strength and static level on the basis voits per meter at the distance of some 35 miles.

A five-kilowatt transmitter in New York City some 14 miles distant, is intercepting system. Since the wave interceptor must of necessity inter-cept more or less energy accord-ing to its length, the factor of length must also be taken into considera-tion. Thus we arrive at the unit of milli-volt per meter, which means just what it signifies, namely, that a given signal or static strength will induce one milli-volt of potential difference for every meter of the wave-intercepting conductor. Translated into everyday practice, it may be added that signal strengths of a tenth of a milli-volt per meter, represent very poor reception; one milli-volt represents fair reception; 10 milli-volts represents good reception, and 100 milli-volts more or least reception.

Now static lends itself to the same scale of measurement, so that it may be compared and contrasted with various signal strengths. Static is a variable factor, changing from hour to hour, day to day, month to month. to hour, day to day, month to month, and even year to year. As a general rule, however, there is far more static in midsummer than at any time of the year; and for the run of a typical summer season, the mean or average static level may be considered as one milli-volt per meter.

The story of reception this summer, which marks the first application of really high-power radiocasttion of really high-power radiocasting service, is told in the accompanying graph designated as Fig. 1. It will be noted that the mean or average static levels of 1 milli-voit per meter is shown in shaded section. It represents a figurative sea of disturbance which must overwhelm.

It represents a figurative sea of dis-turbances which must overwhelm any signal that chances to fall be-low the indicated surface.

In the case of the 500-watt or ½-kilowatt transmitter, the signal strength drops off rapidly or, to be more specific, inversely as the square of the distance. At a distance of 15 miles, therefore, the signal strength has dropped down to 1 milli-volt per meter, which is equivalent to the static level for heavy atmospheric disturbances. From that distance on, then, the signal strength has plunged below the static level and increas-ingly serious interference is encoun-

The 5-kilowatt station scores a marked improvement over the fore-going power, once considered ample for good radiocasting service. In this case the signal strength drops down until it strikes the milli-volt per meter value at 50 miles. From that distance on the signal strength plunges below the static level and good service is no longer assured.

watts, or the full power possible with the WJZ transmitter at Bound Brook, N. J., and the WGY transmitter at Schenectady, N. Y., it will be noted that the signal strength is maintained at remarkably high levels over a great distance, finally dropping down to 1 milli-volt per meter at a distance of 150 miles.

It is the point at which the signal strength coincides with the average summertime noise level that determines the service range of the radiocaster. Within the service range, the radiocaster is capable of furnishing a good and reliable program service at any time, with the possible exception of those rare instances when a violent thunderstorm is brewing in the immediate vicinity of the receiver. The service range is a conservative estimate, so that the radioceiver. The service range is a conservative estimate, so that the radiocaster may be heard at far greater distances if the listener is content to experience some static interference especially when atmospheric conditions are exceptionally unfavorable. Within the service range, however, good service is possible even in midsummer.

From the foregoing graph, it will be noted that signal strength drops rapidly with increasing distance. This explains why static is hardly noticeable when receiving local programs, while distant programs are "fringed." The next graph, Fig. 2, explains this state of affairs. Here are the average signal strengths for three radiocasting stations, as received at the RCA Technical Building at Van Cortlandt Park, or the northern outskirts of New York City. The signal strength for the powerful 50-kilowatt WJZ transmitter (actually operating on about 35 kilowatts in this instance), averages 14 milli-

A five-kilowatt transmitter in New York City some 14 miles distant, is received with signal strength of eight milli-volts per meter. Both the foregoing stations are therefore excellent local stations. A Philadelphia station, on the other hand, over a distance of 90 miles, gives a field strength of one milli-volt per meter, which, during summer, is not always sufficient for satisfactory reception. The two local stations, with their high signal strengths, ride through practically "untouched," with the possible exception of purely local and violent thunderstorms.

STRONG TONE DISPLAYED IN STOCK MARKET

Short Covering a Factor-Steels Again Prominent -Burns Bros. a Feature

NEW YORK, July 23 (P)—Stock prices displayed a strong undertone at the opening of today's market. Bear raders, who had sold stocks freely ste yesterday in anticipation of an acrease in the New York Federal Reerve. Bond rediscount rate, which siled to materialize, rushed to cover heir commitments, initial gains of a bint or so being recorded by Mack rucks, General Electric (new), Concleum, Colorado Fuel and U. S. Steel mmon.

Execution of a large volume of over-night buying orders brought about numerous gains of 1 to 5 points in the early trading. Speculators for the de-cline renewed their attacks, however, whenever the popular industrial is-sues showed signs of slowing up, in-dicating their belief that a further downward revision of prices was necessary after the recent sustained advance.

Steels gathered fresh strength from the publication of the favorable quarterly report of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, with considerable encouragement derived by operators on the long side from the statement of President Eugene Grace that the recent increase in steel prices had not caused any appreciable lessening in demand.

Bullish operations were conducted with vigor in a number of specialries fourns Bros. A being one of the first to be pushed up to a new high level for the year on a quick run-up of more than 5 points.

Foreign exchanges made further recovery despite over-night reports that was having some difficulty in forming a coalition government

The usual week-end profit taking swelled the volume of selling as the session progressed. United States Cast Iron Pipe broke nearly 10 points from its early high before mid-day, and sharp recessions took place in a number of other high priced specialties, particularly Du Pont and Woolworth. Meanwhile, bullish demonstrations continued in other sections of the list, American Power & Light, Mexican Seaboard Oil and Greene-Cananea Copper all being elevated to new high levels for the year.

French Bonds Again Up

Copper all being elevated to new high levels for the year.

French Bonds Again Up Moderately higher prices for most classes of foreign and domestic obligations marked today's early bond dealings. Some of the buying apparently reflected Wall Street's relief over the failure of Federal Reserve Bank to increase its rediscount rate.

French obligations continued to recover from their recent setback. Government bonds were steady, while the Paris-Lyons-Mediterranean 7s, Seine 7s and Marsellies 6s advanced fractionally to more than a point.

Trading interest elsewhere in the foreign group centered on great consolidated power of Japan 6s, which moved up a half point. Italian 7s, however, were weak.

Price changes of railroad liens were conflicting. Nickel Plate 5½s moved ahead in response to the progress made on the new merger plan, but Atlantic Coast Line 4s and Erie convertibles were slightly lower.

Skelly Oil 6½s, Sinclair 6s and PanAmerican Petroleum 6s scored moderate gains.

WHEAT PRICES HIGHER TODAY

CHICAGO, July 23 (P)—Unexpected firmness of Liverpool quotations, together with higher temperatures in the northwest, helped to bring about an early advance today in wheat values here. Sellers were scarce.

Opening at 4c to %c gain, wheat soon rose to a material further extent. Corn and oats also ascended, corn starting % to 1%c up, and later showing additional strength. Provisions held about steady.

Opening prices today were: Wheat—July 1.40%: September 1.41%: December 1.45%. Corn—September 82%: December 3.5%. Oats—September 42%: December 45.

PROFITS SHOW MARKED DROP

60 P. C. Slump in Rubber Prices Chief Factor-Outlook More Promising

NEW YORK. July 23—B. F. Goodrich Company's report for the first half of the year, which will soon be made public, will reveal a decided drop in earnings compared with the first six months of 1925.

Interests in close touch with the company's affairs state that Goodrich dend requirements of 31,311,520 for the first half-year. This compares with net income of 37,106,000, after depreciation, interest and federal taxes, or common stock outstanding in the first six months of 1925.

It is believed the management will continue its policy of readjusting inventory values to correspond with the prevailing quotations for crude rubber at the end of the six months' period. Had it not been for the sharp decline in the value of the finished products, caused by the slump in the raw commonly market, Goodrichs showing would have compared favorably with the first six months of last year.

However, the constructive and farseeing practices of Goodrich officials in the paying dividends on the common stock.

· LIGHT CATTLE AND LAMBS UP, BUT HOGS DROP

Butchers and Packing Sows Off 75c. to $1.25 - Yearlings at Season's Peak

CHICAGO, July 23 (Special)—An erstwhile optimistic hog market went glimmering, values breaking 75c to $1.25 this week on the Chicago market. Heavy butchers and packing sows showed the maximum decline.

In steers, yearlings advanced 25c, reinstating themselves at the peak of the season and moving actively at the advance. In sharp contrast with little cattle were heavies which, after an ephemeral advance, again went on the toboggan and finished in the doldrums, neglected and as low as any time this year.

toboggan and finished in the doldrums, neglected and as low as any time this year.

Most other classes of slaughter cattle worked unevenly higher, the snap in the yearling trade helping butcher helifers 25 to 50c, while a short run of cows advanced beef kinds 25c.

In lambs, according to a report issued by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, it was a supply and demand proposition, curtailment of northwestern grass lambs, which are now running more liberally to feeders, stimulating a 50 to 60 cent upturn.

Top light hogs fell to 313.75 compared with $14.75 a week earlier. Choice heavy steers sank to $10, although $10.50 was paid early in the week; but $07 pound mixed steers and helifer yearlings sold late upward to $10.65, equal to the season's peak. Fat Washington lambs reached $15, comparable kinds having sold around $14.25 a week earlier.

As the week closed the average price of hogs was near $12 at Chicago, having declined to $12.24 on Wednesday when the daily average weight stood at 271 pounds. Last calendar week, the average cost of packer and shipper droves was $12.75, while for the week ended July 3, the average was $13.50, average weights then standing at 266 pounds.

Early in June the local average cost reached $14.39 and the average cost reached $15.50 and most packing sows sold at $10.50 and most packing lbs. stopped at 12.50 and most packing sows sold at $10 to $10.50.

On good choice heavy steers it was largely a $9 to 9.75 market, late, choice 1616 lb. averages stopping at the outside figure. The line of cleavage in weight was around 1200 lbs, and 1500 lb, kinds were practically without o'llet regardless of finish.

On the other hand yearlings sold freely at $10 upward, and even short fed kinds made $5.50 and better, so lively was the scramble for kinds scaling under 700 lbs. Helfers made $10.25 and 10.30.

Fat western grass lambs started the wock on a higher basis at $14.40 for the best, most natives selling as was $1.75. Stimulated by small receipts, sellers later urged prices to $15, natives sharing the upturn and landing at the close on a $14 to 14.25 basis, with culla at $11 to $1.50.

EXPECT COTTON CROP OF 15,368,000 BALES

WASHINGTON, July 23 (49)—A cotton crop of 15,268,000, equivalent to 500 pound bales this year is indicated by the condition of the crop on July 16, which was 70.7 her cent of a hormal, the department of agriculture today announced.

A crop of 15,25,000 bales was forecast from the July 1 condition of 75.4 per cent. Last year a crop was 16,103,679 bales.

Indications are that the acre production will be 155.8 pounds compared with a forecast of 158.5 pounds from July 1 conditions.

London—There have recently returned to London, from Persia and Irak respectively, two interesting personalities in the oil world. Sir John Cadman, Britain's greatest technical oil authority and deputy chairman of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, has arrived from Persia, and Sir Adam Ritchie, general manager of the Turkish Petroleum Company, has come over from Irak. This last is, of course, a combination of international interests, with British predominating, including the Anglo-Persian interests in Irak.

The Turkish Petroleum Company has now completed its geological surveys in Northern Irak far enough to put down test wells. It has accordingly beed decided to begin the necessary arrangements at once, which will take some months, for drilling 10 wells to a depth, if necessary. of 5000 feet. the Jutland heaths, is setting labor went for nothing in a short time. the world an example in economic progress which, in the light of the American Forest Week, commands more than passing attention. In calling on the American people to give full weight to the bad results of impoverished forests and idle land, President Coolidge could have pointed to what Denmark, with re-stricted means at her command, has accomplished in that part of her domain that points northward from the main body of the European continent. Nations concerned with reclamation work are giving close study to her achievements in that di-As the Danish Heath Society, with headquarters at Viborg, is versary, the moment may be oppor-tune for looking closer at this devel-opment as it is today and as to what is its future promise.

There is a closer relationship be tween militarism in its aggressive form and the reclamation of Danish waste lands then would appear on the surface. As a matter of fact, the war of 1864 with Germany, which lost to Denmark the southern provinces of Schleswig-Holstein, proved the inspiration for a movement which, at first looked at askance, gradually enlisted the support of both Government and neonle, it was both Government and people. It was a dispirited Denmark that took stoc of itself and its resources as tha unfortunate war came to an end and it was then that a few far-visioned men, led by Col. E. M. Dalgas, declared with emphasis that "What has been lost without must be regained within."

Oranized in 1866

This was the slogan adopted by the Danish Heath Society on its or-ganization March 28, 1866. It has ganization waren 25, 1888. It has proved a powerful argument in favor of intensive forest cultivation. Sixty years ago there were hundreds upon hundreds of acres of idle, worthless land in Jutiand, without a single human being able to subsist on them, where now many farms find protections. where now many farms find protec-tion behind tree-covered areas that stand as a wall against the winds sweeping inland from the North Sea. At the present time more than half of the former waste land has been brought under cultivation, and been brought under cultivation, and been brought under cultivation, and the scope of the society extends beyond the immediate borders of Jutland, or even Denmark. For the Danish colony of the distant Faroe Islands is also getting the benefit of the society's investigations and efforts. And with the return of North Siesvig to the mother country, as a result of Germany's defeat in the Great War, opportunity is likethe Great War, opportunity is like-wise presented for the society to ex-ert its beneficial influence.

The Founder's Son

To one who like the present writer made personal observation of the labors of the society 20 years ago, and who revisited the same parts of the country the past summer, it is brought vividly home to what a degree the work has prospered. It is certainly true that a score of years is not a long time in the history of forest growth, but even then the tender plants had prospered.

One reason why success has attended the labors of the Danish Heath Society is that after long and careful research the right kind of trees were found for the particular soils to be planted. But it is not to be thought for a moment that the waste lands of Jutland did not receive the attention of the Government long before the establishment of the society. In fact, as early as 1723, King Frederik IV issued a decree according to which any one who would sattle on the heath would be exempt from taxation for 20 years, and both the head of the family and his sons would be exempt from military service. But these offers proved far from tempting to those already settled comfortably in the village in other parts of the country Subsequently, Frederik V appointed. SALMON IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Substitute for Chestnut Tree May Be Found in the Sweet Acorn

An Experiment Is Being Conducted by a Chicagoan, to Transplant Saplings or Grafts From Majorca

Palma, Majorca
Special Correspondence

OTANISTS and foresters the world over are watching with interest the experiment now being conducted by a wealthy Chicaboan to transplant, from these islands of the Mediterranean, saplings or train across the Union Pacific Rail-road.

ing the past 25 years, but it may mount into millions of dollars. Anyone successfully combating it will be hailed as a public benefactor. The sweet acorn tree is immune from the pest and its fruit closely resembles that of the American chestnut.

Missionary Tells of Efforts Made to Check the Drift South to the Mines

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON—"Soap making is one of our industries at Kampole," the Rev. James A. Ross told a Monitor corre-spondent in describing his life for the past 22 years as a missionary of the London Missionary Society in Northern Rhodesia. To counteract the drift of natives to the mines fur-ther south with the inexifable break bricks and build model houses on the new pattern and they are growing dp to recognize these as the best type of house."

The Northern Rhodesian Government is watching Mr. Rose's work closely. On his way home to London, he received a promise from the authorities of $200 a year toward an agricultural teacher to help him.

of the Mediterranean, saplings or grafts of the sweet acorn as a substitute for the American chestnut tree, rapidly becoming extinct because of the blight.

It is impossible to estimate the commercial loss to the American lumber industry and edible nut trade as a result of the blights' record during the substitution of the s e sline and we breezes, did so on a clothesline which swung a lifeboat from its davits—of chesinut.

Many lands were visited and researches made by the Chicagoan and the experts who accompanied him before this "earthly paradise" (as Chopin described Majorca in 1838) was found to contain a good substitute. Native Mallorquins eat acoras as freely as a Richmond (Va.) pickaninny does goobers (peanuts): indeed, peanuts are common in Palma though acorns seem to have the preference. The latter are, not acrid and bitter as is the fruit of the spinnate, white or live oak of North America, but are as sweet and toothsome as the old-fashioned American chestnut and are still more delictous when roasted or boiled. Fed in their raw state to live stock, they are said to have a high food value. The trees yield acorns prolifically, and tests made some time ago proved them to be absolutely "blight resistant."

The possibility of grafting healthy American chestnut scions upon young Majorca sweet acors trees of of budding good chestnut stock upon them is said to be in contemplation. Whether the Chicago millionaire will import thousands of sweet acorn saplings and, after planting them in the United States, graft or bud them with acions or buds from surviving American chestnut trees is problematical

The association gave its approval to the serial bond method of financing city bond issues as opposed to the sinking fund plan. This move followed an explanation of the rela-tive merits of the two methods by Walter Matscheck, director of the Kanass City Public Service Insti-

Because of the report of the House Foreign Affairs Committee favoring the adoption of the

so-called Tinkham Resolution, requesting the President of the United States to call a third Hague conference, or to accept on the part of his Government an invitation from any other country to participate in such a conference, for the purpose of codifying international law, increased public interest probably will be felt in the matter, which may, sooner or later, be undertaken. In the resolution referred to, the four principal purposes for which the conference should be called are stated. They are: (1) To restate the established rules of international law; (2) to formulate and agree upon the amendments and additions, if any, to the rules of international law shown to be necessary or useful; (3) to endeavor to reconcile divergent views and to secure general agreement upon the rules which have been in dispute heretofore; and (4) to consider the subjects not now adequately regulated by international law, but to which the interest of international justice requires that rules of law shall be declared and accepted.

It is stated that this resolution follows the recommendations of the Advisory Committee of Jurists, assembled at The Hague in 1920, of which Elihu Root, former Secretary of State, was a member. In the recommendations made at that time care was taken to make it plain that the proposed work of codification which such a conference would undertake was quite different from that which falls to compilers or codifiers usually. Mr. Root also, in a report submitted to the twenty-third conference of the Interparliamentary Union, in Washington, last October, took occasion to prepare public thought along this line. He said:

The process is not properly codification in the sense in which that term is used to apply to municipal law. What is called for now and what we mean when we speak of codification of international law is the making of law, and the necessary process is described in the report of Louis Renault which I have quoted. The ordinary codifier has to deal with existing law created by the dictum of superior power. He has to systematize, classify, arrange, and state clearly what he finds to be already the law, and if there be doubt it is to be resolved by appeal to the same superior power. The task now before the civilized world is to make law where law has not yet existed, because of a lack of agreement upon what it ought to be. The process is necessarily a process of agreement quite different in its character from the process of codification and declaration by superior authority. Codification, properly so called, is, however, a necessary incident in this of codification of international law is the making of law. erly so called, is, however, a necessary incident in this law-making process, because to extend the law without duplication or confusion we must know definitely what the law already is; and so far as the law-making process reaches conclusions, the statement of those conclusions may be called codification, although the process by which the conclusions are reached must necessarily be entirely different from the process of codification.

That it is generally agreed among the progressive nations of this era that a basis of common understanding can be found and established, is both encouraging and gratifying. The method indicates a marked advance from the slow and tedious processes by which international law was formerly created and written. Then it was formulated only from rules occasionally adopted in particular concrete cases. The progress was slow, too slow, as has been shown, to keep pace with the advancing civilization of the last and the present century. Changing conditions in civilized countries have been rapid and progressive—more rapid, in fact, than the growth of international law by the older

So it appears that there is much more for the proposed conference to do than merely to restate and rearrange those conventions and agree-ments which have been found to be workable and practicable in the conduct of international affairs. New agreements must be framed and discussed. Differences of opinion and of interest that have been the cause of friction in the past. Surely it is better that they should be dealt with openly in friendly conference than that they should be allowed to cause friction and strife. The thought of the people of the world is prepared for just such an undertaking, which promises the peaceful adjudication, finally, of international disputes by a court of competent jurisdiction, governed by a code to which the nations have voluntarily subscribed.

Substantiation of the claim that the United

Developing Markets

States leads the world in both the production and the use of motor vehicles is afforded in the latest statistics of the industry issued by

Markets
for

the industry issued by the Department of Commerce. At the same time this census brings to light some rather significant facts in regard to saturating the markets for these vehicles. It is stated that the number of automobiles in use in the United States is over four times as great in the United States is over four times as great as the number in operation in the whole of the remainder of the world. This, it is acknowledged, however, is evidently due not entirely to the fact that the manufacturers of this country have concentrated on quantity production and been able to produce cars at a moderate price to the user, but results rather from the fact that America has more mileage of good roads than any other country of the world. The United States boasts of one automobile to every six persons, as contrasted with one car to every seventy-one persons in the whole world. In number of cars to population Hawafi stands next, followed by New Zealand, Australia and then Denmark. Afghanistan stands at the bottom of the list, preceded by China, Russia, French Indo-China, India, British West Africa and Jugoslavia. in the United States is over four times as great

French Indo-China, India, British West Africa and Jugoslavia.

In popularizing the use of the automobile, as every manufacturer will testify, it is essential that the utility of the vehicle be clearly established. That means that the car shall not rione be capable of doing that for which the prospective user has need of it, but that it can be had upon terms which are economical. By extending the mileage of good roads in the United States a great many obstacles in the way of selling more automobiles have been removed.

During the past year or so further obstacles have been overcome by the substantial reductions made in the prices of the cars offered for sale and the terms allowed to prospective pur-chasers. As a consequence the greater number of cars operating throughout the world are American made. In all countries, with the exception of Algeria, Austria, France, Germany, Hungary, Italy, Netherlands, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and Jugoslavia, 50 per cent or more of the automobiles in operation are American made. In most of the countries of the Western Hemisphere over 75 per cent of the motorcars in operation are American made. With the further development of good roads in South America a greatly augmented market will be opened up to the manufacturers.

When taken in this broader light it will be seen that it is difficult to estimate the saturation point, regarding which so much has been said by market estimators. To figure on the possibilities of further sales it is necessary to take into account the types of motor vehicles which can be developed. Enough, however, is known to indicate that the saturation point is undoubtedly far in the future.

Everyone who is interested in the improvement of the conditions of native life under colonial administration

will be glad to hear that the International Labor Office at Geneva has decided to set up a commission of experts to study the problems of native labor with a view to making an international agreement on points on which humanity demands action. Although the anti-slavery convention, which is to be discussed in September. seeks to abolish slavery in all its forms, it is felt even by some of its most ardent supporters to be rather weak in its proposals for dealing forced labor. Viscount Cecil, who promoted the convention, would indeed have liked to have proposed more drastic action for the suppression of all forms of forced labor, but he believed that he would endanger the convention

The result is that although forced labor is permitted primarily for public works and services, the convention leaves a loophole for compelling natives to work for private purposes. It is to investigate this question and the abuses of existing legislation that the International Labor Office hopes to obtain the services of men with an intimate knowledge of colonial administration like Sir Frederick Lugard, former Governor-General of Nigeria; Mr. van Rees, former Vice-President of the Dutch East Indies; General Freire d'Andrade, former Governor-General of Mozambique, and Sir Charles Ernest Low, Deputy Commissioner of the Cen-tral Provinces of India.

It is, in the opinion of the I. L. O., impossible to lay down a minimum standard for labor in the employment of natives as regards wages, hours of work, or conditions of employment generally, because the divergencies in the methods of employing natives are so great. The commission will, therefore, limit its inquiry to such forms of labor as still retain a servile character. Forced and indentured labor has been the subject of much legislation and a number of treaties, and the experts will be presented by the I. L. O. with a survey of all these measures for regulation of native labor, which unfortunately are not all observed. The I. L. O. is opposed to all forms of forced labor, but has to accept conditions as it finds them, and since forced labor is permitted, it proposes to ask the experts to decide what could be done by international agreement to render it less obnoxious until it is abolished.

Thus the experts will be asked to report what, in their opinion, are the categories of natives, men, women and children, who may be called on for public services such as road-making, working on railways and public buildings, and the cleaning of streets and houses. The L. O. holds very strongly that no women or children should be forced to work, and that the proportion of men to be taken from any tribe should be strictly limited.

There are many other questions to be investigated.

There are many other questions to be investigated, such as the hours of work, and the rate of wages for forced labor, and the food to be supplied to the natives. If civilized nations, with tropical possessions, think it right to impose conditions of life upon some of the natives in order to obtain their labor which are in effect semislavery, on the plea that public services could not otherwise be carried out, the services could not otherwise be carried out, the utmost care should be taken to render the conditions of labor as far removed from slavery as possible. Forced labor should at all events be absolutely forbidden for private purposes. If the I. L. O. succeeds in drafting an international agreement for the better regulation of such forced labor as is permissible for the public service, the governments which are responsible can hardly refuse to consider it.

There is no question that Duncan Mathewson, chief of detectives of the San Francisco police department, touched in his address to the thirty-

Character Building
in the Home

Character is built on the strength and influence of the situation. There is a tendency noticeable today in certain quarters to minimize this feature of the situation. The school, the law, the church, these are cited as representing the most important influence operating to moid the character of the growing generation. Mr. Mathewson put his finger upon the heart of the problem in asserting that the corner stone of the home is character.

That nation which the gnizes that crime prevention begins in the cradle and which strives to make this recognition, practical has taken a large step toward a radical diminishing of the crime in its midst. On the other hand, that nation which allows the belief to obtain currency that the home exercises but a small influence in the question is shutting its syes to a danger among the most subtle that can assafilt. in the question is shutting its eyes to a ser among the most subtle that can assail it.

Though it is unwise to ignore the other aspects of the issue, if it came to a choice between those aspects and the influence of the home, the latter would probably outweigh them by a large margin. It is, indeed, almost impossible to overestimate the force which early impressions exercise upon later actions.

When one realizes, therefore, the insidious efforts being made at the present time to becloud the national consciousness in many sections of the world on the question of prohibition, it is easy to see why the effort is being made to belittle the influence of the home. In countless instances children in the United States. for instance, from their earliest infancy are learning to believe that breaking the law is not only permissible but actually praiseworthy. They are seeing a practical exemplification of defiant delinquency in the persons of those whom they are naturally inclined to look up to as examples to be imitated. And they are growing up with the belief deeply ingrained that they are entitled to outwit the Government whenever they can do so unchallenged. Let the home take its rightful place in the education of the children of a nation, and many of the problems that have previously been regarded as virtually beyond solution will be found largely to have solved themselves.

No single engineering achievement attracted greater interest in the United States, before and

the Brooklyn

after its completion in the year 1883, than the Brooklyn suspension bridge, which spans the East River between Manhattan Island and Long Island. With that enterprise the name of Washington A. Roebling will always be associated. It was he who, while still a young man, took up the project initiated by his father, John A. Roebling, and from the uncompleted plans which had been prepared, carried the work to a successful conclusion. The elder Roebling had gained special distinction in the field of engineering by planning and com-pleting, in the year 1851, the railroad suspension bridge over the Niagara River. That structure ranked at the time as the largest of its kind anywhere, and was regarded as one of the wonders of the world.

The younger Roebling brought to the task which fell to him in Brooklyn the engineering experience gained as his father's assistant in building the suspension bridge over the Allegheny River at Pittsburgh, and that over the Ohio River at Cincinnati. He was fortified with technical knowledge gained at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy, N. Y., from which he was graduated in 1857. But the undertaking upon which circumstances compelled him to enter was a stupendous one, conceived by one who had, by progressive accomplishments along that line, dared to project a structure which others had only dreamed might sometime be erected. Washington Roebling, who saw service in the Civil War as a colonel, realized, as did his father, that the Brooklyn Bridge project would present problems requiring a display of the greatest technical skill. The pneumatic caisson was a device then new in the engineering world. It had been successfully employed in Germany, experience gained as his father's assistant in was a device then new in the engineering world. It had been successfully employed in Germany, France and England, though nowhere in so large an undertaking as that upon which father and son were preparing to enter. In these European countries the younger Roebling learned all that experience could teach him of the newer methods employed, as well as the advances made at that time in the manufacture of structural steel.

But it is one thing to possess the technical knowledge necessary for laying out and planning, in minute detail, a structure of the kind projected, and quite another to apply that knowledge in meeting and overcoming unexpected emergencies as they arise. It was in the latter respect, it appears, that the actual builder of the Brooklyn Bridge displayed his unusual talents. The success which finally crowned his efforts was due to that consecration and fidelity which was due to that consecration and fidelity which he brought to his task, without which no amount of technical skill would have availed. It is because of these that the magnificent structure stands today as what promises to be an enduring monument to the name which he made famous.

Editorial Notes

Mr. Lloyd George's personal reason, stated in his address to the seventh world convention of Christian Endeavor in the Crystal Palace in London, for feeling so strongly on the questions of arbitration and disarmament carries with it of arbitration and disarmament carries with it an appeal that will surely touch many a heart. "I was one of those who had to bear the burden, some years ago, of leading the youth of the world into war. That is why I am an earnest advocate of peace." He had previously called to thought that "we old fellows" were brought up in a world that regarded armaments, with occasional wars, as part of the grim essentials of human civilization, and he made the forecast that, unless this belief was utterly destroyed from human consciousness, there would be no telling what might occur in the future in the direction of other conflicts. It is the war thought that must be eliminated, and the right idea of peace planted in its place. Withal, however, Whittier's sentiment can well be pondered:

But dream not helm and harness

But dream not helm and harness
The sign of valor true:
Peace hath higher tests of manhood
Than battle ever knew.

More than an ordinary affair is the second national Indian Congress assembled in Spokane, Wash., where representatives of twenty-eight great tribes have gathered, and to which many thousands of tourists who are lovers of the spectacular have wended their way. Bright regalia, strange teepees and unique costumes, all will be presented in a pageant of a nature almost to challenge description. Of course, there will be serious phases of the congress to enlist the participation of tribal leaders and nationally known authorities on the affairs of the American Indian, but there will also be "play hours" that will be colorful in the extreme. The meeting should mean the forging of one

The Kansas City Star

A GREATER degree of public interest than is ordinarily taken in the change of ownership of a newspaper attaches to the recent purchase of the Kansas City Star by a group of former employees. It might be stretching the point a bit to class as a former employee Irwin R. Kirkwood, who has been at the helm since the stretching the point and the stretching the point and the stretching the point and the stretching Irwin R. Kirkwood, who has been at the helm since the passing of his father-in-law, William Rockhill Nelson, founder of the Star, but certainly Mr. Kirkwood has had the Nelson idea of newspaper publishing drilled into him sufficiently to require no experimenting in order to continue the success of the Star.

The keynote of the Star's success was Mr. Nelson's undeviating adherence to the standard of right. In a broad sense, the paper, had no other redies. Probably broad sense, the paper had no other policy. Probably the clearest index to the character of the Star was this: When it came time to decide what the Star's attitude would be toward a question of politics, civic improvement, education, supporting a man for public office, or anything else, it would not be necessary to go to the owner to have the question answered. the question answered.

The greenest reporter, the woman in charge of the files, in fact, almost anybody, even in the mechanical departments, could tell you immediately what the Star's attitude would be, because there was only one question to be settled, and that was: "Is it right? And if it is right, is it good for Kansas City?" If it was not right, it was not to the interest of the people and the future of Kansas City, and the Star would not support the proposition, no matter what it was or what it might mean in the pockets of the owner or his friends.

It was this guiding thought which built up the remarkable esprit de corps for which the Star was noted during the Nelson administration. Men worked for small salaries with the most intense enthusiasm, worked nine, ten, and sometimes sixteen hours a day, some of them with only one day off every two weeks, without complaint because they felt that they were doing a great service; that they were part of something that was more than a money-making organization; that they were serving the cause of right and justice in an effective manner, all of which was worth to them more than money. If the present owners can succeed in keeping their staff imbued with that same sense of things and can hold their ship steered as straight as heretofore through all weather, their primary success is assured.

The passing of Mr. Nelson was followed by an exodus of Star men, most of them going East. All of these men have been successful, which is indication enough of their caliber. Many of them might have started their eastern careers much sooner with greater profit to themselves, but the Nelson ideals of service and justice appealed to them too strongly.

The same thing that explains the hold which the Star had on its staff also explains the remarkable position which this newspaper held in its community. Everybody in Kansas City read the Star. Every family that could spare ten cents a week had the paper delivered at its door morning, evening and Sunday. There were people, of course, who read opposition papers, but all of them took the Star regularly—a situation which probably has never existed in any other American city.

When conversation lagged, Kansas City folk always had more than the weather topic to resort to. They thought of the Star first. It was a subject about which everybody knew something and, unlike the weather, nobody had to do any guessing about it.

The readers knew, just as the staff did, that the Star was concerned only with serving the best interests of the city and its people. It was the Star's constant hammering that literally had lifted the city out of the mud and given it not only pavements, but one of the most beautiful park and boulevard systems maintained by any city in the United States; it was the Star that advocated and put through city planning at a time when most cities were United States; it was the Star that advocated and put through city planning at a time when most cities were simply growing up like Topsy; that gave it a clear water supply; that supported honest and high-minded office holders regardless of party affiliations and exposed all irregularities as soon as they were discovered, not hesitating to tear down its own political heroes as soon as it was discovered that they had proved unworthy of the trust the people had placed in thems.

For these reasons opposition personners found it difficult

For these reasons opposition newspapers found it difficult to gain a foothold while Mr. Nelson was at the helm. There was, after all, only one right way, and Mr. Nelson was pursuing that. Sensationalism and other circulation tricks could not make inroads upon such a premise.

The streets might ring daily with the ery of "Extra" from the loudest voiced opposition newsboys obtainable, but the people could not be fooled. The first question which arose in their thoughts was not what had happened, but what paper was getting out the extra. If it was, a Star extra, they bought, no matter if it was midnight and it was necessary to walk down three flights of stairs in bedroom slippers to get a copy. For the people had confidence in their Star. They knew that if the Star got out an extra, which might not be oftener than once or twice a year, it was justified by the importance of the news it carried.

Yet strangely enough the operation respect that server.

Yet strangely enough, the opposition papers that came and went during Mr. Nelson's ownership always sought to introduce new and sensational phases of newspaper publishing. No attempt ever was made to compete with the Star in its own field, and as a result no really remous connection development.

opposition developed.

It was to be expected that in its many fights Mr. Nelson's Star should make bitter and relentless enemies, but because the Star and its owner always fought wit's clean hands and the community knew it, it came to be something of a disgrace to be counted as an enemy of this newspaper. Without absolute honesty and sincerity there might have been grave danger in the wielding of such power by a newspaper. But Mr. Nelson's Star was published, as he used to say, "for the people who bought it. It must be their champion in everything."

The loss of an election or of any fight was never seriously considered by the Star's owner. And sometimes when even the most enthusiastic of his young men felt a bit discouraged these words would roll out from the depths of the powerful frame of the white-haired chief:

The Star cannot be defeated if it is right. An election that goes contrary to its policies is only a temporary sethack. Right will always triumph in the end. It must prevail.

The new owners would have difficulty in discovering a

London

I on Don at the moment is througed by American visitors, and plus-fours are to be seen everywhere on the more frequented streets. So common has the plus-four costume become with Americans that the British may well be excused for believing it to be a sort of national regalis. Ships arriving at Southampton, Plymouth, Liverpool and London have discharged their crowds, the cabin liners seeming to be especially popular. An incident reported from the last trip of the Orea seems to show that Americans might well learn something of the national anthems of other countries before embarking. The Orea's orchestra gave a concert at the esptain's dinner, and out of courtesy to the American passengers played "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the first selection. The American passengers rose and sang the words with great unction. The orchestra very properly then started "God Save the King." The Americans, believing it to be "America" that was being played, rose and sang the words of that song also, somewhat to the amassement of the British, who made up a large number of the passengers.

The coal strike seems to be another illustration of the old saying that every cloud has a silver lining. While the consumption of coal in Britain has gone down from 4,000,000 to 800,000 tom a week, the air has cleared to such an extent that many Londoners are getting a resil view of London for the first time in their lives. In addition to the remarkable change in the visibility, there has been enough rain to give all the city a thorough washing.

To try to suppress opinion the colliery interests must take up the question of combination. It is no use anybody sitting on his own cabbage patch and thinking he is going to make his fortune. We have to face unexampled conditions of trade.—Lord Aberconucy. In addition to the remarkable change in the visibility, there has been enough rain to give all the city a thorough washing, and colors hitherto musuapected have been brought cut, sometimes in most unusual places. The view of London that can now be obtained, either from the top of St. Paul's or from Parliament Hill and Primrose Hill, is striking in clearness and interest. The roof and towers of the Crystal Palace can now be seen with great clearness from the Strand, which is seven and one-half miles away. The views from the Thames bridges are also striking and unusual. Londoners bope that the present clearness will not occur again until modern methods of smoke consumption become general, and that is recognized to be years ahead, but in the meantime they are getting some greatly appreciated ideas of how their wonderful city really looks.

An illuminating instance of how postal regulations sometimes recoil on the devoted heads of the postal authorities has come to light here. It appears that typewritten notices of meetings are allowed to be franked at the halfpenny rate only if they are handed in to the post office in batches of twenty or over, and accompanied by a signed form. Notices not complying with this regulation must be sent at the penny halfpenny rate, or they will be surcharged. A lady has now written to the papers to say that recently she had occasion to send thirteen such notices. Finding that the postage would be 1/7½ she addressed seven additional copies to herself, signed her form and saved 9½d, while the Post Office had the extra trouble of delivering seven unnecessary notices.

It is not often that a mere frog, even if he is a six-inch giant American buillfrog, gets such attention from the police as a specimen recently schieved in London. A consignment of snakes, frogs, lisards and other reptiles was on its way from the London Docks to the Zoological Gardens. While the proposed change, similar to the "stagger system proposed for New York theaters, would doubt belp the railroad men to care for their young passeng it would certainly remove one of the most pictures features of midsummer in London, when thousands joyous, gayly clothed youngsters turn the main rails stations into miniature bediams with their shouts to parting schoolmates and shricks of welcome to part and friends.

"The Orator's Art in America"

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

To the Editor of The Christian Science Monitor:

I have read with much interest an article on a recent Home Forum page of the Monitor, entitled, "The Orator's Art in America," by "P. K.," in which he comes to the conclusion, after hearing a high school oratorical contest and the national oratorical contest finals, that oratory has lost its hold on the public and that the printing press, the radio, the phonograph and other means of duplication have taken the orator's place.

He says it is a common expression, "What we want is not oratory, but facts." It seems to me that no greater misconception of real oratory could occur than that. The orator must deal with facts. He must state facts. I cannot conceive of a deliberate falsifier being a real orator. Certain facts can be printed in cold type and exert an influence upon those who are receptive to these facts. But along comes the orator, who, by the burning sincerity and power of conviction back of these same facts, wakens his hearers stirs them, makes them receptive. Like a ranger, he brands these facts on the concousness of his hearers. That power, that sincerity and conviction back of the words is oratory, the impulsion of the words and sentences like the power back of the speeding arrow or the projectile from the gun.

It seems to me that this is the day of the orator as never before in the history of the Nation. Every day meetings, huncheons, banquets, conventions, assembles are swayed and stirred by real orators. The Lyceum and Chautauqua platform today sends orators to the communities of the United States and Canada that support 6000 local chautauquas and 10,000 lyceum courses, and directly or indirectly affect the thinking of at least 10,000,000 people.

Multitudes of people are being wakened by the orator as they would not be wakened by the printed page. This has always been true, and likely will go on being true. A striking instance came under my observation a few days ago. A certain booklet was distributed to the members of a convention. It was read and
